Letter from the Publisher

The Los Angeles Business Journal was proud to host our inaugural Top 100 Lawyers Awards event on the evening of May 12th at ASU California Center. This exciting event shone the spotlight on the region’s outstanding legal community by recognizing Los Angeles’ top 100 lawyers for their legal achievements, community involvement and impacts on the profession. In addition, we also presented several specialty awards to those who continue to excel in profession in unique and impactful ways.

Considering the fact that the Los Angeles region has long been known for its status as a hub for legal thought leaders and record-setting attorneys, being a standout in that field is particularly impressive.

After 11 years, we at the Los Angeles Business Journal decided to restructure our Leaders in Law event. We will now honor our esteemed

Los Angeles legal professionals in two different ways moving forward, this Top 100 Lawyers event and a Corporate Counsel Awards event in October.

The 100 lawyers listed throughout this section have demonstrated exceptional legal skill and achievements across the full spectrum of responsibility, exemplary leadership and contributions to the Los Angeles community at large.

In the following pages we share biographical information on these legal thought leaders and shed some additional light on some of the premier examples of business law practitioners among us today.

We hope you enjoy this special section, which contains some unique insights on what exactly it means to be a leading attorney in today’s business climate.

Best regards,

Josh Schimmels

ATTORNEY TO WATCH

RENÉE DELPHIN-RODRIGUEZ

Partner
Crowell & Moring LLP

Without question an attorney to watch, Renée Delphin-Rodriguez brings a unique blend of law firm and in-house experience to her partner role at Crowell & Moring. She served as assistant general counsel to a Fortune 500 health care company and general counsel to a health care management services organization. Her broad understanding of managed care and value-based payment arrangements, combined with her corporate experience, allows her to effectively guide clients through complex transactions and provide strategic advice in a heavily regulated industry.

Delphin-Rodriguez is also passionate about associate mentorship and is active with Crowell & Moring's affinity group for Black attorneys. During the pandemic, she initiated monthly check-in calls with the Black partners in the firm. These check-ins have fostered a sense of community and kinship among the Black partners.

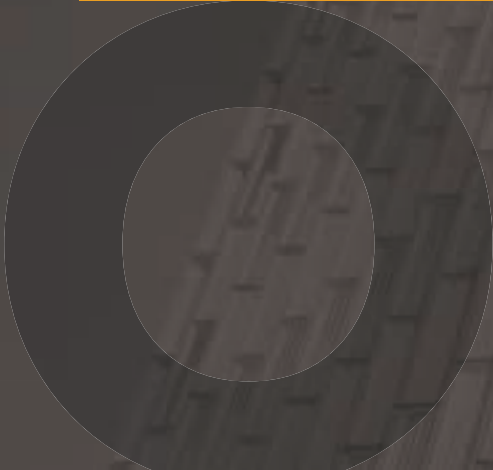

She represented GigCapital2, Inc. and GigCapital3, Inc. (SPACs) in their initial public offerings; represented GigCapital, Inc. (SPAC) in its business combination with Kaleyra S.p.A.; and represented 99 Cents Only Stores in its going-private transaction, among other high profile matters.

Delphin-Rodriguez has also represented Berkshire Hathaway in several public company acquisitions, including its acquisition of Wesco Financial and Oriental Trading Company.

She also plays an impactful role in the community. CHAMPION OF DIVERSITY

DAN CLIVNER

Managing Partner
Sidley Austin LLP

Dan Clivner’s already well-established leadership skills were especially crucial during recent events. As a diverse lawyer, Clivner was deeply involved with Sidley Austin lawyers from diverse backgrounds seeking to address injustice and other issues of concern to them in the aftermath of the George Floyd murder.

His extensive work outside the firm includes leadership at several prominent organizations. He is a former chairman of the board and leader of the capital campaign for Public Counsel, the largest pro bono public interest law firm in the nation, and served for six years as director of APLA Healthcare (formerly known as AIDS Project Los Angeles). He is also a member of the Williams Institute Legal Council at UCLA Law School, the nation’s leading research center on sexual orientation and gender identity law and public policy, which engages in legal research, public policy analysis, judicial training and leadership development.

Clivner has been an LGBTQ diversity pioneer throughout his career, breaking down barriers and helping others to do so as well. When he became partner at Simpson Thacher in 1998, he was one of only three openly gay partners. Since that time, he has filled many roles as a leader and mentor in the LGBTQ community, both within the legal profession and in local and national organizations outside the industry.

Within Sidley, his advocacy and leadership has helped with increasing the numbers of diverse and LGBTQ lawyers at the firm. For the past five years, a majority of the firm’s summer associates and incoming associates have been diverse or LGBTQ lawyers.

Sacks, Glazier, Franklin & Lodise LLP

It's true that Terrence Franklin is regarded as one of the top litigators in the U.S. by clients and colleagues, but one of his greatest impacts has been his role as an influential mentor. He is renowned for his commitment to furthering the advancement of minority lawyers. As a gay, African American lawyer, Franklin works tirelessly to bring awareness and educate others about the importance of diversity and inclusion.

Franklin holds countless leadership positions in organizations which impact the law and support his mission to "Help Bend the Arc of History Towards Justice." EVA DAVIS

Chair, Transactions Department
Winston & Strawn LLP

As a woman in the predominantly male private equity field, Eva Davis works hard to connect and support women in the industry. She serves on Winston's Women's Leadership Council (2011-present) and champions women's voices through thought leadership. In 2020, Davis wrote a scorching response to a Forbes article that asserted women don't want to own their own private equity firms. She even worked with Winston to host a four-part event titled "Correcting the Record: Yes, Women Want to Own Their Own PE Firms." During the event, women GPs provided insights into launching and running their own PE firms and LPs discussed key considerations for making an investment in a first-time fund.

She is involved with a variety of local, academic, and professional communities. She is especially proud of her contributions to Read To A Child. Since 2004, Davis has served as the organization's chairwoman of the Regional Board of Directors (Los Angeles). In 2020 she spearheaded Winston's continued support of the program as the inaugural sponsor of its Read Aloud program, donating money, and identifying authors who could be recorded reading their books aloud for children in quarantine. In 2021, Read To A Child presented Davis with its Lifetime Achievement award.

Davis' community involvement also includes her work on the Institute for Corporate Counsel Advisory Board (2019 - present); Board of Governors (2010 - 2018); and Institute chairwoman (2013 - 2014).

My Advice to a Young Lawyer: Never Miss a Beat

By PERRIE M. WEINER

“You only get better by playing. If you think you stink, you probably do.”
– Buddy Rich, legendary American jazz drummer

I’m a securities litigation lawyer by day and – if I say so myself – a “hidden gem” of a drummer by night, still waiting for my band’s big break. In between playing sets with my bands through the years, I’ve learned how to embrace the rhythm of the business of law and play to my strengths. The result is a career that I’m proud of, collaborating with scores of professionals whose work I admire. I thought I would offer a few principles that have guided me through my own career to the next generation of legal talent rising up in Los Angeles. In a time when many seem to struggle to find success and contentment personally and professionally, I’m hoping my words offer some encouragement.

- First things first, love what you do. If you love being a lawyer and your area of expertise, then every day – or most days – will be joyful. For me, I love being an entrepreneur, the business of law and trying new things since I bore easily.
- There are no short cuts. Success takes hard work. Consider the words of the legendary jazz drummer, Buddy Rich, “You only get better by playing.” Work hard to be the best that you can be in your field, which includes trying new approaches and continuing to grow a bit more every day.

My flexibility and open-mindedness enable me to build and lead offices and practice groups. For example, when COVID hit, I pivoted several times, first launching our Lease Litigation & Restructuring Practice, and then forming Baker McKenzie’s SPAC Rapid Respond Team to serve client’s needs.

- Regardless of your age or stage in your career, you can mentor and motivate others to be the very best they can be. Success doesn’t happen in a vacuum – it is a result of the synergies that are borne out of strong, collegial teams. If your goal is to be a rainmaker with a large practice, you need to be a part of a strong team because you won’t be able to do it alone.

I’m extremely grateful to work with such a fantastic team of lawyers and professionals. They are all incredibly smart, talented and hard working. I learn new and fresh approaches from them and from seeing cases through their eyes.

- Give people the respect they deserve. It surprises me how many people don’t realize that common courtesy is an oft-overlooked key to success. Be immediately responsive to a client’s needs and above all else, listen to them.

Whenever I meet with a client, I listen before I speak. I find out what their objective is in litigation. Most clients have a very specific business objective, and it’s critical to work with them to define it, because it’s not always immediately apparent. After that, it’s easy to figure out the best strategy to use to meet your client’s objective and get them across the finish line. That’s what winning is all about. It’s not your win – it’s your client’s win.

- Don’t forget about your passions outside of the office. For me, this is a combination of giving back to my community while keeping my dream alive of becoming the next Charlie Watts (Rolling Stones), Stewart Copeland (Police), Keith Moon (The Who) or John Bonham (Led Zeppelin).

My current band, Run BMC, competes annually in Law Rocks, a “battle of the bands” competition supporting local charities. In this year’s competition at the Whisky A Go Go on Sunset, the event raised $230,000 in total. Run BMC raised $17,000 specifically for L.A. Family Housing, which provides housing and related care for those who are homeless or on the verge of being homeless.

Above all else, find a work-life rhythm and never lose sight of the importance of being there for your family. Family is the ultimate support group. Law can be a very demanding profession. But there has to be a give and take. Yes, it’s an honor to be recognized by the Los Angeles Business Journal. But if you don’t have a wonderful family to celebrate with, what’s the point?

Perrie M. Weiner is partner in charge of Baker McKenzie’s Los Angeles office and Chair of the firm’s North America Securities Litigation Group.

SEC Proposes SPAC Rules to Provide Additional Investor Protections

By DAVID KAUFMAN, Partner – Thompson Coburn LLP & HALEY KAVANAUGH, Associate – Thompson Coburn LLP

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) recently issued proposed rules governing SPACs (special purpose acquisition companies) that would, among other things, increase SPAC disclosure requirements in an effort to protect investors.

Since their boom in 2020, SPACs have had a tumultuous history riddled with low-performance post-merger and an array of shareholder litigation. The SEC intends for the proposed rules to provide additional investor protections during SPAC IPOs and during the merger with a private target company (de-SPAC transaction) and more fully parallel the de-SPAC transaction regulations with those of a traditional IPO.

The proposed rules would (i) increase disclosure requirements; (ii) subject target companies and underwriters to potential liability; (iii) eliminate the safe harbor for future projections; and (iv) provide clarification on steps SPACs can take so as to not be considered an investment company, as discussed below:

- DISCLOSURE
- Require disclosure of material interests of the sponsors and their affiliates, including the nature and amounts of all compensation paid to the sponsor and its affiliates so investors can more carefully understand how the interests of the sponsors may differ from those of the investors.
 - Require disclosure regarding conflicts of interest of the sponsors, including the payment structure and any interests the sponsor may have to complete a de-SPAC transaction, even if on unfavorable terms.
 - Require disclosure regarding the potential for future dilution, including as part of PIPE financing or as part of the terms of the de-SPAC transaction.
 - Require affirmation by the SPAC that the terms of the merger and any related financing to complete the deal are fair to all investors.
- LIABILITY
- Treat target companies as co-registrants on the registration statements filed by the SPAC in connection with the de-SPAC transactions, which would make the target company liable on any misleading disclosures.
 - Clarify that an underwriter in a SPAC IPO

- may be deemed an underwriter in the de-SPAC transaction if it takes steps to facilitate the de-SPAC transaction or any related financing transactions, or otherwise participates in the de-SPAC transaction, which exposes underwriters to potential liability if disclosures are inaccurate or misleading in registration statements.
- PROJECTIONS
- Amend the definition of “blank check company,” so that forward looking statements and projections, even those accompanied by cautionary language, would not fall within the safe harbor under the Securities Exchange Act.
- INVESTMENT COMPANY
- Clarify what steps a SPAC can take to distinguish itself from an investment company (which are subject to additional regulations), which includes meeting the below conditions:
 1. SPAC IPO proceeds can only be invested in cash, government securities or certain money-market funds;
 2. SPACs must complete the de-SPAC transaction within 24 months of the SPAC IPO; and
 3. SPACs will be primarily engaged in the business of the target company after the de-SPAC transaction.

While the increase in disclosure requirements was expected based on prior guidance from the SEC, the additional rules regarding liability to target companies and underwriters, as well as, the elimination of the safe harbor for projections, may deter private companies and investment banks from participating in SPACs going forward. Additionally, the clarification on whether a SPAC constitutes an investment company may prove to have an effect on current shareholder litigation in which shareholders allege SPACs acted as an investment company and should be subject to more regulation. While not yet final, the proposed rules provide insight into current SEC thinking on SPACs and how they should be regulated going forward.

Public comments will be accepted for 60 days following publication of the proposing release on the SEC’s website or 30 days upon publication of the proposing release in the Federal Register, whichever is longer.

MILLER | BARONDESS LLP

How to Be a Firm that Businesses Call When Billions are at Stake

If you read the news, you have likely read about the work of Munger, Tolles & Olson LLP (MTO). Headquartered in Los Angeles, MTO is sought after by some of the world's largest companies when the stakes are high.

The firm was founded in 1962 by seven lawyers, including Charlie Munger, vice-chairman of Berkshire Hathaway. Today, this 200-lawyer firm has three offices and a “who’s who” roster of clients such as Google, Disney, Bank of America, PG&E, BNSF, Intel, Amgen, Fortress and Berkshire Hathaway, among many others.

We sat down with firm chair Brad D. Brian, a Chambers Global-ranked trial lawyer and one of 18 “Lawyers of the Decade” in California honored by the Daily Journal.

We unpacked the philosophies that form the core of MTO’s original and enduring formula for success.

MTO is celebrating its 60th anniversary this year. What was the original vision when the firm was founded? Has it changed?

BRIAN: More than half a century ago, our seven founders set out to create an entirely different kind of law firm—dedicated to solving companies’ most complex problems, hiring and promoting the brightest lawyers, and giving back to the community—all through a democratic culture that encouraged early responsibility and ownership. Our vision remains unchanged. We think it has helped us maintain our commitment to hiring exceptional lawyers who can guide companies through their most challenging problems. We hire only top talent, recruiting from the top 5% to 10% of law school classes and from clerkships. Around 85% of our lawyers clerked for judges and 10% clerked for the U.S. Supreme Court. No other firm in the country replicates this while handling the complex cases that we do.

Many law firms tout differentiation. What are the most distinctive elements of MTO’s offering to an outsider?

BRIAN: It is our “problem-solving culture.” I think we excel at getting really smart lawyers together in a room—or on Zoom—to solve our client’s most difficult problems. This can be a crisis like the civil and criminal litigation arising from the Northern California wildfires, a complex appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, or a multi-billion dollar transaction. Our work has helped us earn a reputation for navigating complex issues that require out-of-the-box thinking.

Second, our firm is loaded with exceptional trial lawyers. We are often called upon to try cases across the country, in state and federal courts, and in arbitrations. Whether it’s John Spiegel, Greg Stone, Hailyn Chen, Glenn Pomerantz, Malcolm Heinicke, Martin Estrada, Bryan Heckenlively, Bethany Kristovich, Jonathan Kravis, Robyn Bacon, Laura Smolowe, or Blanca Young—to name just some of our trial lawyers—we match up quite well against any of the largest firms in the country.

MTO seems to disprove the notion that “bigger is better” when it comes to law firm success. What is MTO’s secret to punching above its weight class?

BRIAN: Much of our firm’s success comes from our low leverage and lack of hierarchy. Our low leverage model—known as our “one-to-one” partner/associate ratio—is a byproduct of hiring the best people. It serves our clients well because it means we do not need to over-staff cases. Having recruited the brightest lawyers in the first place, we entrust them with early responsibility. For clients, this means that if you hire us, you get an exceptionally talented team, from our newest lawyers to our most experienced partners.

I also believe our lack of hierarchy has created a breeding ground for the creativity we are known for. We don’t require lawyers to select a practice group. Lawyers can build their workloads by matching interests to active matters. We believe that when lawyers have freedom, they will be drawn to client work that satisfies them and the legal issues they are uniquely positioned to tackle. This creates a sweet spot where personal interests, skill, and client needs intersect.

This also creates a more collegial environment, which serves both our clients and lawyers. When you reject hierarchy, you eliminate detrimental behavior like politicking and rivalry. In a flat law firm like ours, there are no bosses to please and no one to elbow aside for a title. Instead, all of your energy goes into what is most important: doing the best work for our clients.
